

🛡️ HerdGuard — NZ Farm-Hygiene Ecommerce Marketing Prototype

Portfolio piece · July 2026

An end-to-end digital-marketing portfolio project: a Shopify-style store, SEO, a Meta campaign, email and a GA4 measurement plan for a fictional New Zealand dairy & poultry hygiene brand.

📁 PORTFOLIO PROTOTYPE. HerdGuard is a made-up brand. Not a real store; not affiliated with any real company. No ads were run, no spend, no real sales — all metrics shown are illustrative placeholders.

The brief I set myself

Show the full ecommerce loop a digital marketer runs — build the store, get it found, drive traffic, capture the audience, and prove I can measure it — using the NZ farm-hygiene audience's own language.

The audience & their words

NZ dairy (primary) and poultry (secondary) farmers. Copy uses their vocabulary sourced from DairyNZ & MPI: teat spray, emollient, cups off, coverage, SCC, footbath, biosecurity. Pain points: mastitis & high cell counts, poor teat condition, inconsistent spray coverage, keeping disease out.

Two products

- Teat Spray Concentrate — emollient-rich, dairy.
- Shed & Footbath Disinfectant — broad-spectrum, dairy + poultry biosecurity.

Store & campaign visuals

What I built

Store	Home, collection & 2 product pages (Shopify-style), desktop + mobile
SEO	Titles & meta descriptions, keyword + internal-link map, checklist
Meta ads	Campaign brief + 2 A/B ad concepts (mock-ups) — drafts only, no spend
Content	7-day calendar + 3 social posts
Email	Sandbox launch newsletter (A/B subject lines, CTA, measures)
Analytics	GA4 event spec + funnel + 1-page dashboard

Measurement thinking

Keep awareness (reach, sessions), engagement (view_item, add_to_cart, email CTR) and sales (checkout, purchase, stockist leads) as separate questions — never one blended number. UTM's on every paid/email link for attribution.

PORTFOLIO PROTOTYPE — HerdGuard is a fictional brand created for a digital-marketing portfolio. Not a real store and not affiliated with any company.

Protects test condition

Emollient-rich test spray to help keep skin soft, supple and free of cracks through spring and cold snaps.

Made for milk quality

Good test-spraying practice is shown to cut new mastitis infections by around half — the routines are on every page.

Biosecurity ready

Broad-spectrum shed and footbath disinfectant for dairy and poultry — practical entry-point hygiene.

Fast rural delivery

NZ-wide dispatch with bulk and concentrate sizes, so you order less often and never run dry mid-season.

Two products. Both farm-proven routines.

Start with the essentials most NZ farms recorder — test spray for the shed and a broad-spectrum disinfectant for biosecurity.

We sell the routine, not just the bottle

Product only works if it's used right. Every HerdGuard page includes the practical routine — because coverage and consistency are where most gains (and losses) actually happen.

TEAT HEALTH

Spray every teat, every cow, every milking

Apply immediately after cups come off, all through lactation, aiming for full coverage — the step most often "poorly done".

MIXING

15–20% emollient, mixed fresh

Keep emollient at 15–20% of the final mix (higher in high-challenge times) and remake every 1–3 days with drinking-quality water.

BIOSECURITY

Footbaths at every entry point

People, vehicles and equipment carry disease. Keep charged footbaths at shed doors and gates and refresh them regularly.

✓ Emollient-rich (15–20% in final mix). Formulated to help condition test skin and keep it soft and supple, with the option to lift emollient in high-challenge periods.

✓ Made for full coverage. Sprays evenly for the complete teat coverage that good post-milking practice depends on.

✓ Concentrate or RTU. Mix your own to your preferred rate, or grab ready-to-use for simplicity.

✓ Bulk-friendly sizes. 20L and 200L options so you reorder less often across a big season.

Test spraying after every milking is shown to reduce new mastitis infections by around 50% as a practice (DairyNZ). This is a benefit of good test-spray routine, not a product-specific claim. Results depend on coverage, mixing and milking management. Always follow label directions.

HOW TO USE — THE ROUTINE

Spray all teats of every cow immediately after the cups come off, right through lactation, aiming for complete coverage. If mixing from concentrate, keep emollient at 15–20% of the final mix (higher during high-challenge times), remake fresh every 1–3 days, and use drinking-quality water. Store out of direct sun and frost.
